

GET TO KNOW ANDREA

Before pursuing her career as a physician assistant, Andrea discovered a deep love for geriatrics while working as an assisted living caregiver and medication technician. Through additional experience on a palliative care team, she learned how to approach death and dying with dignity and compassion. Now with AgeRight, she helps manage the wellness of her member patients, identifying health concerns, prescribing medications, and often functioning as their primary care provider. “I enjoy spending time with each member in their own environment, and allowing them to have agency in their health,” she says.

“ Growing up surrounded by multiple generations of family members caring for each other taught me the importance of family involvement in senior care, which is a value I hold in my practice.”

ANDREA AT-A-GLANCE:

- Certified physician assistant with extensive experience in senior care settings
- Doctor of Medical Science (DMSc) degree from George Fox University
- Special expertise in palliative care
- Loves reading, bowling, and bringing people together over games and a good meal

