

GET TO KNOW ANGIE

While Angie was still in nursing school, her mom was diagnosed with cancer, and the assistance of a nurse practitioner was vital as she endured multiple surgeries and treatments. “She was so amazingly supportive, and I knew that I wanted to help patients and their families in that way as well,” she says. As a nurse practitioner since 2012, Angie’s practice has included breast medical oncology, post-acute care and internal medicine. Now with AgeRight, she appreciates the opportunity to practice evidence-based medicine with a dedicated and passionate team.

“ I love working with patients when they are still fragile, and aiding in their recoveries. The greatest reward is when a patient has improved so much that they can go back to their normal lives.”
